Last Month's Mystery

We offer kudos to Bob Bailey for solving the mystery of Dick McBride. Since the Philadelphia Inquirer always referred to him as John Dickson McBride, we were able to find a likely candidate in the census. He was the son of Andrew and Jane McBride. A search of the Philadelphia Inquirer using genealogybank.com revealed the obituaries of both his parents. They were both buried in Monument Cemetery in Philadelphia. Bob knew that during the 1950s, the bodies from Monument Cemetery were moved to Lawnview Cemetery in Rockledge, Pennsylvania. Bob contacted Lawnview and their records showed that McBride was buried there in July of 1916. Fortunately, they also had a note that he was former ballplayer Dick McBride and that he died January 20, 1916. It is interesting that he wasn't buried until July. There was no obituary in the Philadelphia Inquirer, but obviously, this is our man. Bob is the winner of the Find of the Month award.

October 12, 1890

On October 12, 1890, Philadelphia played a home game in Gloucester, New Jersey against Syracuse to close out their season. Manager Bill Sharsig picked up four local players to play in the game: McBride, Stafford, Sweigert, and Sterling. At some point, the publishers of the early encyclopedias attached first names to these players. John F. McBride was an umpire of the time. Robert Stafford, Hampton Sweigert, and John Sterling were minor leaguers. There is no proof that these were the players who played in that game and it is extremely likely that they didn't. We have no biographical clues for any of them except for a note that Sterling came from Camden. Since these players have not been positively identified, I am removing all the biographical information we have and we can start from scratch to figure out who they are. Unfortunately, I doubt we will ever be able to identify them.

Bill Sharsig has provided many nightmares for the biographical committee with the personnel from this team. In addition to the four previously mentioned gentlemen, Blondie Purcell, George Crawford, Ed Green, William Price, and the mysterious Mr. Macey are still on our "wanted list." We have only recently found Horace Helmbold, Ed Carfrey, and the Shaffer brothers. This might be baseball's most "mysterious" team.

Shorty Wetzel

Here is another new missing player. William Shakespeare "Shorty" Wetzel was an infielder who died in 1899. His career started in 1889 and he was definitely not the 1885 Baltimore pitcher. That player was George Wetzel and we have no biographical information on him although he does appear to be from Philadelphia. There are several George Wetzels floating around Philadelphia at that time and we have been unable to pinpoint which one is the ballplayer.

Jack McCarthy

Jack McCarthy had a fairly lengthy major league career. He debuted in 1893 and played with various teams until 1907. We had listed his death as September 11, 1931 in San Francisco. That death is for the umpire Jack McCarthy who is not the ballplayer Jack McCarthy. The ballplayer married a Kansas City girl named Jessie Halpin and became a tailor in Chicago. He is listed in the 1930 census in Chicago and he played in an old-timers game in Chicago in 1933 so he lived at least that long. Jessie McCarthy died May 12, 1943 in Chicago, but as of yet, we have not been able to find Jack. Jack McCarthy is our Mystery of the Month.

The Rookie List

At the end of the report you will find the list of rookies who made their debuts in 2007. There were 211 players and 4 non-playing managers. Due to us adding the states for some of the Latin countries and a few unusually long names, the formatting isn't as readable as I would like, but hopefully everyone can decipher it.

The following players all had relatives who played in the majors: Daniel Barone – grandson of Dick Barone, Shelley Duncan – son of Dave Duncan and brother of Chris Duncan, Andy LaRoche – son of Dave LaRoche and brother of Adam LaRoche, Eric Patterson – brother of Corey Patterson, Bronson Sardinha – brother of Dane Sardinha, and Justin Upton – brother of B. J. Upton.

We had our first player born in Saudi Arabia. Craig Stansberry was born in Dammam, Saudi Arabia. That was the only new country we added in 2007. The oldest rookie was Masumi Kuwata who debuted at the ripe old age of 39. The youngest was Justin Upton. At 19, he was the only teenager to play in 2007. The tallest was Darren Clarke at 6-08 and the shortest were Tony Abreu, Edwin Bellorin, William Collazo, Nathan Haynes, Akinori Iwamura, and Mel Stocker at 5-09. Where have you gone, Freddie Patek? The heaviest were Jonathan Albaladejo and Robert Blackburn at 250 and the lightest was Edwar Ramirez at 150.

There were certainly some interesting names. 2007 featured the player with the longest last name in baseball history, Jarrod Saltalamacchia, and the player with the shortest last name in baseball history, Chin-Lung Hu. In case you were wondering, Hu's on short. We had the player with the first hyphenated last name in baseball history, Ryan Rowland-Smith. Bronson Sardinha became the second player known to be named after Charles Bronson and the first player with the middle name of Kiheimahanaomauiakeo. We can only hope he uses that name when he signs autographs. The animal kingdom was well-represented with a Fox, Wolf, Dove, Buck, and Salmon. We had players named Liz and Lucy, and Cherry and Pie. Bronson Sardinha notwithstanding, my favorite name is Rocky Cherry. I'm sure there will soon be an ice cream flavor named after him.

Birthday List

Here are the nonagenarians celebrating birthdays in November and December.
